

Iowa FNAWS College Scholarship Application

The Iowa Foundation for North American Wild Sheep (Iowa FNAWS) is a non-profit wildlife conservation organization dedicated to providing funding for wildlife-related research projects, habitat improvement, increasing youth involvement in hunting and fishing, protecting hunters' rights, and supporting hunters and outfitters in the outdoors. Projects for trapping and transplanting sheep, disease research, building water catchment structures (guzzlers), monitoring sheep behavior and movement, and improvement of wildlife habitat are but a few of the ways Iowa FNAWS has provided funding totaling over $8 million to date. In addition, college scholarships are being offered for students that meet the following criteria:

- Iowa FNAWS will offer one scholarship per year to students at the University of Nebraska – Lincoln, Iowa State University, and South Dakota State University in the amount of $2500 each.
- Applicants must be enrolled in a Natural Resources or similar major and must have a junior standing or higher (by credit hours) in the academic year for which they receive the scholarship.
- Scholarship applications will be due by March 15 with scholarships being awarded for the following academic year.
- Applicants will apply on this application and include a cover letter and resume.
- The scholarship committee will consider academic standing (GPA), financial need, career employment goals, and hunting and outdoor background.
- Summer employment with a resource management agency (also internships and volunteer work) will be considered.
- Extracurricular activities pertaining to natural resources (Wildlife Club, memberships and participation in conservation organizations) will be considered.
- Applicants must supply at least one reference.
- Payment of scholarships by Iowa FNAWS will be through the financial aid office of each university (will need student ID# for this).
- The scholarship committee may develop other criteria as needed.
